The Loomex Group Ltd. Recognizes the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation

Peterborough, Ontario: On September 30, 2026, The Loomex Group Ltd. joins people across the country in recognizing the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation. The day honours Survivors of residential schools, the children who never returned home, and the families and Indigenous communities who continue to live with the lasting impacts of the residential school system.

The National Day for Truth and Reconciliation was established as a federal statutory holiday in 2021 in response to Call to Action 80 of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada. It is observed on the same day as Orange Shirt Day, which recognizes the experiences of residential school Survivors and affirms that Every Child Matters.

Through its emergency management work, The Loomex Group Ltd. has had the privilege of supporting First Nations communities during evacuations, large-scale displacements, and other emergencies. These experiences have shown the team that emergency management goes well beyond logistics and response. At its heart, the work is about people, relationships, trust, and respect.

The Loomex Group Ltd. is grateful for the knowledge, patience, and perspectives that Indigenous leaders, Elders, community members, and partners have shared with its team. Each time they work together, the team has had the opportunity to listen, learn, and strengthen the ways it supports communities during some of their most difficult moments.

Reflecting on the day, Trent Gervais, president and CEO of The Loomex Group Ltd., said, "Some of the most important lessons our team has learned have come from the communities we've been invited to support. The National Day for Truth and Reconciliation is a time to remember, to listen, and to learn. It also reminds us that there are still steps to be taken, and we're committed to walking forward together."
